

FIC

- So having said, he thus to Eve in few:
 Say, woman, what is this which thou hast done? Milton.
 Thus Jupiter in few unfolds the charge. Dryden's Æn.
 The firm resolve I here in few disclose. Pope's Odyssey.
- FIC'WEL. n. f. [feus, French.] Combustible matter; materials for keeping fire: as firewood, coal.
 If a spark of error have thus far prevailed, falling even where the wood was green, and farthest off from any inclination unto furious attempts, must not the peril thereof be greater in men, whose minds are as dry fewels, apt beforehand unto tumults, seditions and broils? Hooker, Dedication.
 Others may give the fewel or the fire;
 But they the breath, that makes the flame, inspire. Denham.
 A known quantity of fewel, all kindled at once, will cause water to boil, which being lighted gradually will never be able to do it. Bentley's Sermons.
- To FIC'WEL. v. a. [from the noun.] To feed with fewel.
 Never, alas! the dreadful name,
 That fewels the infernal flame. Cowley.
- FIC'WESS. n. f. [from few.]
 1. Paucity; smallness of number.
 These, by reason of their fewness, I could not distinguish from the numbers of the rest with whom they are embodied. Dryden's Preface to the Hind and Panther.
 2. Paucity of words; brevity; conciseness.
Fewness and truth, 'tis thus. Shakef. Meas. for Measure.
- To FIC'Y. v. a. [veighen, Dutch.] To cleanse a ditch of mud.
 Such muddy deep ditches and pits in the field,
 That all a dry Summer no water will yield,
 By feying and casting that mud upon heaps,
 Commodities many the husbandman reaps. Tuff. Husband.
- FIB. n. f. [A cant word among children.] A lye; a falsehood.
 Destroy his fib or sophistry; in vain,
 The creature's at his dirty work again. Pope's Epistles.
 I so often lie,
 Scarce Harvey's self has told more *fib*s than I. Pope.
- To FIB. v. n. [from the noun.] To lie; to tell lyes; to speak falsely.
 If you have any particular mark, whereby one may know when you fib, and when you speak truth, you had best tell it me. Arbutnot's History of John Bull.
- FIBBER. n. f. [from fib.] A teller of *fib*s.
FIBRE. n. f. [fibres, Fr. fibra, Latin.] A small thread or string; the first constituent parts of bodies.
 Now sliding streams the thirsty plants renew,
 And feed their fibres with reviving dew. Pope.
2. A fibres, in physics, is an animal thread, of which there are different kinds: some are soft, flexible, and a little elastic; and these are either hollow, like small pipes, or spongy and full of little cells, as the nervous and fleshy fibres: others are more solid, flexible, and with a strong elasticity or spring, as the membranous and cartilaginous fibres: and a third sort are hard and flexible, as the fibres of the bones. Now of all these some are very sensible, and others destitute of all sense: some so very small as not to be easily perceived; and others, on the contrary, so big as to be plainly seen; and most of them, when examined with a microscope, appear to be composed of still smaller fibres: these fibres first constitute the substance of the bones, cartilages, ligaments, membranes, nerves, veins, arteries and muscles. And again, by the various texture and different combination of some or all of those parts, the more compound organs are framed; such as the lungs, stomach, liver, legs and arms, the sum of all which make up the body. Quincy.
 My heart sinks in me while I hear him speak,
 And every slacken'd *fib*re drops its hold,
 Like nature letting down the springs of life:
 The name of father awes me still. Dryd. Spanish Fryar.
- FIBRIL. n. f. [fibrella, French.] A small fibre or string.
 The muscles consist of a number of fibres, and each fibre of an incredible number of little fibrils bound together, and divided into little cells. Cheyne's 1st Prin.
- FIBROUS. adj. [fibreux, French, from fibre.] Composed of fibres or famina.
 The difference between bodies fibrous and bodies viscidous is plain; for all wool and tow, and cotton and silk, have a greediness of moisture. Bacon's Natural History.
 I saw Petreus' arms employ'd around
 A well-grown oak, to root it from the ground;
 This way and that he wrench'd the fibrous bands,
 The trunk was like a sapling in his hands. Dryden.
 The fibrous and solid parts of plants pass unaltered through the intestines. Arbutnot on Aliments.
- FIBULA. n. f. [Latin.] The outer and lesser bone of the leg; much smaller than the tibia: it lies on the outside of the leg; and its upper end, which is not so high as the knee, receives the lateral knob of the upper end of the tibia into a small sinus, which it has in its inner side. Its lower end is received into the small sinus of the tibia, and then it extends into a large process, which forms the outer ankle. Quincy.
- FICKLE. adj. [picol, Saxon.]
 1. Changeable; unconstant; irresolute; wavering; unsteady; mutable; changeful; without steady adherence.

FID

- Remember where we are,
 In France amongst a fickle wavering nation. Shak. Hen. VI.
 A slave, whose easy borrow'd pride
 Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows. Shak. K. Lear.
 Or like hovering dreams,
 The fickle pensioners of Morpheus' train. Milton.
 They know how fickle common lovers are;
 Their oaths and vows are cautiously believ'd;
 For few there are but have been once deceiv'd. Dryden.
 We in vain the fickle sex pursue,
 Who change the constant lover for the new. Prior.
2. Not fixed; subject to vicissitude.
 He would be loth
 Us to abolish; lest the adversary
 Triumph, and say, fickle their state, whom God
 Most favours! Milton's Paradise Lost, b. ix.
FID'CLENESS. n. f. [from fickle.] Inconstancy; uncertainty; unsteadiness.
 Neither her great worthiness, nor his own suffering for her, could fether his *fickle*ness; but, before his marriage-day, he had taken to wife that Baccha of whom the complained. Sidney.
 Beware of fraud, beware of *fickle*ness,
 In choice and change of thy dear loved dame. Fairy Queen.
 I am a soldier, and unapt to weep,
 Or to exclaim on fortune's *fickle*ness. Shakef. Henry VI.
 Instability of temper ought to be checked, when it disposes men to wander from one scheme of government to another, since such a *fickle*ness cannot but be attended with fatal consequences. Addison's Freeholder, N^o. 25.
 Whether out of *fickle*ness or design I can't tell, I found that what she liked one day she disliked another. Addison.
- FID'CKLY. adv. [from fickle.] Without certainty or stability.
 Do not now,
 Like a young wasteful heir, mortgage the hopes
 Of godlike majesty on bankrupt terms,
 To raise a present pow'r that's fickly held
 By the frail tenure of the people's will. Southern.
- FIDCO. n. f. [Italian.] An act of contempt done with the fingers, expressing a fig for you.
 Having once recovered his fortress, he then gives the fig to all that his adversaries can by siege, force, or famine attempt against him. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
- FID'CTILE. adj. [fidilis, Latin.] Moulded into form; manufactured by the potter.
 The cause of fragility is an impotency to be extended; and therefore stone is more fragil than metal, and so fidile earth is more fragil than crude earth. Bacon's Nat. History.
- FID'CTION. n. f. [fidis, Latin; fidion, French.]
 1. The act of feigning or inventing.
 If the presence of God in the image, by a mere fidion of the mind, be a sufficient ground to worship that image, is not God's real presence in every creature a far better ground to worship it?
Fidion is of the essence of poetry, as well as of painting: there is a resemblance in one of human bodies, things, and actions, which are not real; and in the other of a true story by a fidion. Dryden's Discrepancy.
2. The thing feigned or invented.
 If through mine ears pierce any consolations,
 By wise discourse, sweet tunes, or poets fidions;
 If ought I cease these hideous exclamations,
 While that my soul, flies, the lives in affliction. Sidney.
 So also was the fidion of those golden apples kept by a dragon, taken from the serpent, which tempted Evah. Raleigh.
3. A falsehood; a lye.
FID'CTIOUS. adj. [fidus, Latin.] Fiditious; imaginary; invented. A word coined by Prior.
 With fancy'd rules and arbitrary laws
 Matter and motion man restrains,
 And study'd lines and fiditious circles draws. Prior.
- FID'CTITIOUS. adj. [fiditius, Latin.]
 1. Counterfeit; false; not genuine.
 Draw him strictly so,
 That all who view the piece may know
 He needs no trappings of fiditious fame. Dryden.
2. Feigned; imaginary.
 The human persons are as fiditious as the airy ones; and Belinda resembles you in nothing but in beauty. Pope.
3. Not real; not true.
 Milton, sensible of this defect in the subject of his poem, brought into it two characters of a shadowy and fiditious nature, in the persons of sin and death, by which means he has interwoven in his fable a very beautiful allegory. Addison's Spec.
- FID'CTIOUSLY. adv. [from fiditious.] Falsely; counterfeitedly.
 These pieces are fiditiously set down, and have no copy in nature. Brown's Vulgar Errors, b. v. c. 20.
- FID. n. f. [fidis, Italian.] A pointed iron with which fœmen untwist their cords. Skinner.
- FIDDLE. n. f. [puetele, Saxon; vedel, Dutch; fidis, German; fidicula, Latin; fidl, Erse.]
 1. A stringed instrument of musick; a violin. In

FIE

- In trials of musical skill the judges did not crown the fiddle, but the performer.
 The adventure of the bear and fiddle
 Is sung; but breaks off in the middle. Hudibras.
 She tried the fiddle all over, by drawing the bow over every part of the strings; but could not, for her heart, find whereabout the tune lay. Addison's Guardian, N^o. 98.
- To FIDDLE. v. n. [from the noun.]
 1. To play upon a fiddle.
 Themistocles being desired at a feast to touch a lute, he said he could not fiddle, but he could make a small town a great city. Bacon's Essays.
 Others import yet nobler arts from France,
 Teach kings to fiddle, and make senates dance. Pope.
 2. To trifle; to shift the hands often, and do nothing, like a fellow that plays upon a fiddle.
 A cunning fellow observed, that old Lewis had stole away part of the map, and saw him fiddling and turning the map, trying to join the two pieces together. Arbut. H. of J. Bull.
 Good cooks cannot abide what they justly call fiddling work, where abundance of time is spent, and little done. Swift.
- FIDDLEFADDLE. n. f. [A cant word.] Trifles.
 She said that their grandfather had a horse shot at Edgehill, and their uncle was at the siege of Buda; with abundance of fiddlefaddle of the same nature. Spektator, N^o. 299.
- FIDDLEFADDLE. adj. Trifling; giving trouble, or making a bufile about nothing.
 'She was a troublesome fiddlefaddle old woman, and so ceremonious that there was no bearing of her. Arbut. J. Bull.
- FIDDLER. n. f. [from fiddle.] A musician; one that plays upon the fiddle.
 Let no fawcy fiddler presume to intrude,
 Unless he is sent for to vary our bliss. Ben. Johnson.
 Nero put the fiddlers to death, for being more skilful in the trade than he was. Taylor's Rule of living holy.
 These will appear such chits in story,
 'Twill turn all policies to jests,
 To be repeated like John Dory,
 When fiddlers sing at feasts. Dryden.
 When mis'd delights in her spinnet,
 A fiddler may a fortune get. Swift.
- FIDDL'ESTICK. n. f. [fiddle and stick.] The bow and hair which a fiddler draws over the strings of a fiddle.
 His grizzly beard was long and thick,
 With which he strung his fiddlestick. Hudibras, p. i.
- FIDDL'ESTRING. n. f. [fiddle and string.] The string of a fiddle; that which makes the noise.
 A fiddlestring, moistened with water, will sink a note in a little time, and consequently must be relaxed or lengthened one sixteenth. Arbutnot on Sir.
- FIDELITY. n. f. [fideltas, Latin; fidelté, French.]
 1. Honesty; veracity.
 The church, by her publick reading of the book of God, preached only as a witness; now the principal thing required in a witness is a fidelté. Hooker, b. v. c. 19.
2. Faithful adherence.
 They mistake credulity for fidelté. Clarke.
- To FIDGE. v. n. [A cant word.] To move nimbly and To FIDGET. v. n. Irregularly. It implies in Scotland agitation.
 Tim, thou'rt the Punch to stir up trouble in;
 You wriggle, fidge, and make a rout,
 Put all your brother puppets out;
 Run on in a perpetual round,
 To teaze, perplex, disturb, confound. Swift.
- FIDUCIAL. adj. [fiducia, Latin.] Confident; undoubting.
 Faith is cordial, and such as God will accept of, when it affords fiducial reliance on the promises, and obedient submission to the commands. Hammond's Pract. Catech.
- FIDUCIARY. n. f. [fiduciarius, Latin.]
 1. One who holds any thing in trust.
 2. One who depends on faith without works.
 The second obstructive is that of the fiduciary, that faith is the only instrument of his justification; and excludes good works from contributing any thing toward it. Hammond.
- FIDUCIARY. adj.
 1. Confident; steady; undoubting; untouched with doubt.
 That faith, which is required of us, is then perfect, when it produces in us a fiduciary assent to whatever the Gospel has revealed. Wake's Preparation for Death.
2. Not to be doubted.
 Eliaiana can rely no where upon mere love and fiduciary obedience, unless at her own home, where she is exemplarily loyal to herself in a high exact obedience. Houel's Poc. Porc.
- FIEF. n. f. [fiief, French.] A fee; a manor; a possession held by some tenure of a superiour.
 To the next realm the stretch'd her sway,
 For painture near adjoining lay,
 A pteous province and alluring prey;
 A chamber of dependencies was fram'd,
 And the whole fiief, in right of poetry, the claim'd. Dryd.
 As they were honoured by great privileges, so their lands were in the nature of fiiefs, for which the possessors were obliged to do personal service at sea. Arbutnot on Coins.

FIE

- FIELD. n. f. [pelo, Saxon; feld, German; veld, Dutch.]
 1. Ground not inhabited; not built on.
 Live with me, and be my love,
 And we will all the pleasure prove,
 That hills and vallies, dale and field,
 And all the craggy mountains yield. Ralegh.
 By the civil law the corpse of persons deceased were buried out of the city in the fields. Ayliffe's Parergon.
2. Ground not enclosed.
Field lands are not exempted from mildews, nor yet from smut, where it is more than in inclosed lands. Mortimer's Husbandry.
3. Cultivated tract of ground.
 Or great Ostris, who first taught the swain
 In Pharian fields to sow the golden grain. Pope's Statius.
4. The open country: opposed to quarters.
 Since his majesty went into the field,
 I have seen her rise from her bed. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
5. The ground of battle.
 What though the field be lost,
 All is not lost. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.
 When a man is in the field, a moderate skill in fencing rather exposes him to the sword of his enemy than secures him from it. Locke.
6. A battle; a campaign; the action of an army while it keeps the field.
 You maintain several factions;
 And whilst a field should be dispatch'd and fought,
 You are disputing of your generals. Shakespeare's Henry VI.
7. A wide expanse.
 The god a clearer space for heav'n design'd;
 Where fields of light and liquid ether flow,
 Purg'd from the pond'rous dregs of earth below. Dryden.
 Ask of yonder argent fields above,
 Why Jove's satellites are less than Jove. Pope's Essay on Man.
8. Space; compass; extent.
 The ill-natured man gives himself a large field to expatiate in; he exposes failings in human nature. Addison's Spectator.
 I should enter upon a field too wide, and too much beaten, if I should display all the advantages of peace. Smalridge.
 Who can this field of miracles survey,
 And not with Galen all in rapture say,
 Behold a God, adore him and obey. Blackmore's Creation.
9. The ground or blank space on which figures are drawn.
 Let the field or ground of the picture be clean, light, and well united with colour. Dryden's Dufresnoy.
10. [In heraldry.] The surface of a shield.
FIELDED. adj. [from field.] Being in field of battle.
 Now, Mars, I prythee, make us quick in work;
 That we with smoking swords may march from hence,
 To help our fielded friends. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
- FIELD-BASIL. n. f. [field and basil.] A plant with a labiated flower, consisting of one leaf, whose upper lip is upright, roundish, and generally split in two; but the beard, or under lip, is divided into three segments: these flowers are disposed in whorles round the stalks, and are succeeded by oblong seeds. Miller.
- FIELDBED. n. f. [field and bed.] A bed contrived to be set up easily in the field.
 Romeo, good-night; I'll to my trucklebed,
 This fielded is too cold for me to sleep. Shak. Rom. and Jul.
- FIELDFARE. n. f. [pelo and papan, to wander in the fields.] A bird.
 Winter birds, as woodcocks and fieldfares, if they come early out of the northern countries, with us shew cold Winters. Bacon's Natural History, N^o. 816.
- FIELDMARSHAL. n. f. [field and marshal.] Commander of an army in the field.
- FIELDMOUSE. n. f. [field and mouse.] A mouse that burrows in banks, and makes her house with various apartments.
 The fieldmouse builds her garner under ground. Dryden.
Fieldmice are apt to gnaw their roots, and kill them in hard Winters. Mortimer's Husbandry.
- FIELDOFFICER. n. f. [field and officer.] An officer whose command in the field extends to a whole regiment: as the colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major.
- FIELDPICCE. adj. [field and picce.] Small cannon used in battles, but not in sieges.
 The basia planting his fieldpieces upon the hills on the North-side, did from thence grievously annoy the defendants. Knales's History of the Turks.
- FIEND. n. f. [fiens, fiens, Saxon, a foe.]
 1. An enemy; the great enemy of mankind; Satan; the devil.
 Tom is followed by the foul fiend. Shakespeare's K. Lear.
2. Any infernal being.
 What now, had I a body again, I could,
 Coming from hell; what fiends would with should be,
 And Hannibal could not have with'd to see. B. Johnson's Cat.
 The hell-hounds, as ungorg'd with flesh and blood,
 Pursue their prey, and seek their wonted food;
 The fiend remounts his courser. Dryden's Thea. and Hon.

O woman!